Big Carmel budget goes bump

Schools must trim $800,000 to stay solvent

By KEN PETERSON

A $7.5 MILLION BUDGET will have to become a $6 million budget if Carmel Unified School District wants to operate its schools during the 1978-79 fiscal year.

Acting Tuesday night, the district trustees approved a tentative $7.5 million spending package with the understanding it must be trimmed by $1.5 million. The budget had been prepared before Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann property tax amendment, passed on June 6.

Boiled down to actual cutbacks, programs must be trimmed by $500,000. The district will make up about $500,000 by cutting its cash reserve fund. Another $500,000 comes from a complicated bookkeeping maneuver which satisfied the Serrano-Priest decision that requires wealthy districts to export a portion of their income to poorer districts.

The final budget of $6,018,000 will be $800,000 smaller than the 1977-78 spending package.

The district collected $4.7 million in local property taxes last year, but will get only $2.9 million under Prop. 13. Another $1.3 million in the current budget will be provided from the state surplus funds freed Saturday when Gov. Brown signed legislation bailing out schools and local governments in the coming year.

THE CARMEL BOARD of trustees authorized formation of a citizens' committee Tuesday night to make recommendations on budget cuts. The board will meet in special session next Thursday at 3 p.m. at Carmel Middle School to discuss the committee's role and officially appoint its members.

The committee will be organized by parents who have been active in the district advisory committee. It will include parents, teachers, a student, nonteaching staff members and administrators from elementary and secondary schools. Membership probably will be drawn from existing school site councils, which recommend policy for each school in the district.

All committee meetings will be public sessions where anyone may comment and suggest budget reductions.

Assistant Superintendent for Business Walter Hinton told the trustees Tuesday that he believed the final district budget will be within $50,000 either way of the $6 million mark. The district's pre-Prop. 13 budget called for $7,519,678 in expenditures.

That budget already was cut by $106,000 from the preliminary budget presented in February.

Hinton estimates that the district will have two increases in the final budget: $10,000 extra for legal fees the reduced county counsel's staff can no longer provide and $10,000 in additional unemployment payments because of staff layoffs.

Overall, he told the trustees, they will have to trim $500,000 between now and the time they adopt a final budget in August.

"As bad as that sounds, it's not as bad as it was last week," he said.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS questioned the board briefly Tuesday night on specific cuts, particularly asking about the athletic program and top district administrators.

Board chairman Richard Wilsdon said those all would be decided later.

Superintendent Harris Taylor, attending his final meeting before returning to the teaching ranks after Friday, was sharply critical of those who want the administrative staff cut back.

"I'm a little tired of this 'let's get the administrators' business," he said. "Let's don't make a game out of this. You have to have administrators out there to run the programs."

Taylor cited figures which show that Carmel's ratio on nonteaching staff to teachers is lower than the state average and other local school districts in every category—administrators, classified employees and pupil personnel staff.

"That shows you where the money is going," he said. "Historically, our money went into smaller class sizes. By any comparative figure, we're not fat."

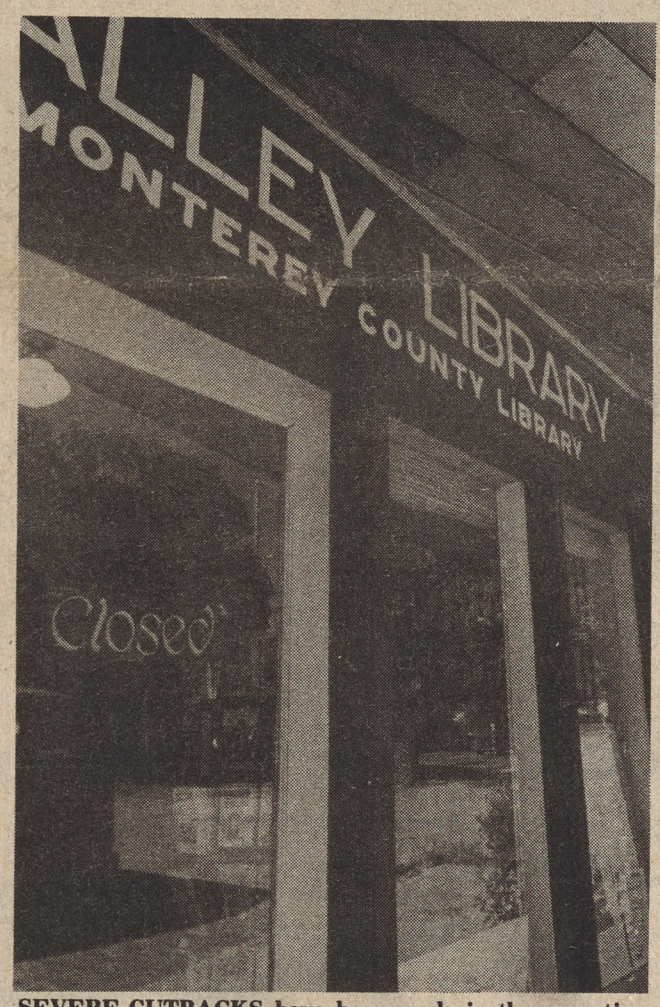

In addition to reviewing the budget, the trustees also passed an emergency resolution which would give them power to unilaterally revoke pay and work conditions of existing employee contracts if necessary to balance the district budget.

THE TRUSTEES SAID they don't expect to exercise the provisions of the resolution, calling it an "insurance policy." The resolution had to be approved before the new fiscal year begins July 1.

It would permit the trustees to freeze all wages, eliminate extra duty work for which teachers get extra pay, cut the work year for classified employees and cut their pay an equivalent amount, and would put a hiring freeze on for all

SEVERE CUTBACKS have been made in the operating hours at the Carmel Valley Library. It is situated in the Village. (Michael Stang photo)

Valley library hours cut back 75 per cent

THE CARMEL VALLEY public library will be open only two days a week beginning Monday because of financial uncertainty caused by passage of Proposition 13.

The library hours, already cut back from 46 to 40 per week, will be trimmed to only 10 hours a week, according to Monterey County Librarian Barbara Wynn.

Next Monday will be the final day of eight-hour operation, according to Rickie Meehling, the librarian at the Carmel Valley branch.

The new hours will begin Friday, July 7. From that date until the library gets new funds or all library money runs out, the branch will be open each Monday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m.

Mrs. Meehling and her assistant, Mary McDonald, both will be laid off and replaced by a single, temporary part-time employee.

Mrs. Meehling said by using the part-time employee, who gets no county benefits, the library will be able to stretch its funds out and keep the branch offices open longer.

"They're really trying to use every penny we have to keep the library open as long as possible," she said.

If the branch is forced to close, it will have to abandon its lease and could lose the building it now occupies on Carmel Valley Road in the village, she said. It could then prove difficult to find another library site.

The county mobile library, which stops at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center and Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, will go out of business on Friday.

The library district will be using $120,000 allocated to buy the land for a new Carmel Valley library in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center to keep its 14 branches open.

Mrs. Wynn said the money would be restored, "if there are funds available.

"We're in a holding situation now," she said.

Resort plan ruled 'inconsistent'

Use permit refused for Marriott Lodge

THE RANCHO CANADA Marriott Lodge proposed for Carmel Valley was declared inconsistent with area master plans Wednesday and thus ineligible to apply for a use permit. The Monterey County Planning Commission made its decision on a swift and firm 6-0 vote.

Attorney Gerald Dalton, representing the developer, Winthrop-Carmel, Inc., said he will appeal the decision to the board of supervisors.

Even if the appeal is successful, project backers would have to come back to the planning commission for a review of the technical feasibility of the 376-room resort hotel complex.

The commission heard a brief discussion on the technical aspects of the proposed on-site sewage treatment system for the hotel Wednesday. But it quickly dropped consideration of the technical "hows" of the application and went straight to the issue of whether it should be built at all.

Commissioner William Peters cited sections of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, the 1976 Lower Carmel Valley amendment to the Valley master plan and the open space element of the county general plan to show that a resort hotel was never intended for the westerly 25 acres of the Rancho Canada Golf Course.

Peters said his reading of all three plans is that the area is intended for either greenbelt open space or, at maximum density, rural residential expansion.

THE PENINSULA AREA plan, he said, indicates the land as greenbelt, a buffer between the concentrated residential and commercial uses at the mouth of the Valley and the rural residential areas farther east.

The Valley master plan allows resort hotels on large parcels if they are not detrimental to the neighboring properties or the community in general, Peters said.

But past history has been that no resort hotels have been approved in the "G" zone—covering most Valley residential areas.

"My reading of the Carmel Valley Master Plan is this was intended to be rural residential expansion and not a resort," he said.

While the Lower Valley amendment to the master plan did not include residential areas—a point stressed by Dalton in his rebuttal to Peters's arguments—it defined the commercial area, according to the commissioner.

By excluding the Marriott property, he said, the intention was to keep the golf course land in open space or for residential use, not as a commercial operation.

Peters admitted that there is a "mish-mash of master plans" covering the area, but said there is one common thread: "Marriott is not in the urban development area."

Valley Women's Club distributes $1,330

Mrs. Irwin Johnson, Carmel Valley Women's Club president, announced the results of the recent Fiesta De Los Amigos this week, a smashing total net benefit to the Valley of $3,300.

Each participating organization kept 80 per cent of the net profit from their individually operated booth.

The Carmel Valley Women's Club received 20 per cent of the total net profit plus the gate receipts. After paying all bills, the club has approximately $1,330 which is to be donated in equal parts to the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department, the Mid-Valley Fire Department, the Cancer Hospice and the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Beth Morrow is installed as new president of Church association

Beth Morrow was installed as president of the Women's Association of the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula during a luncheon meeting in Fellowship Hall at the church on West Carmel Valley Road.

Outgoing president, Dorothy Cardinalli, introduced Margaret De Graff who installed Beth and the following board members: Vivian Daly, first vice president; Mike Pruitt, second vice president; Dorothy Cardinalli, third vice president; Judy Moore, secretary; and Dorothy Von Meir, treasurer. Named representatives were Mildred Willemsen for the Tuesday Circle and Lila Adams for the Wednesday Circle.

The outgoing board of directors was in charge of the luncheon. Devotions were given by Judy Moore and the table floral decor was by Pam Klaughmann.

The program was presented by James B. Pruitt, who spoke on "Monterey Colonial Architecture."

Volunteer teachers ready

Vacation Bible School opens at Community Chapel

Teachers from several Valley churches have volunteered their time for the Vacation Bible School to open July 10 through July 21 in the education building on Village Drive of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel. Young people from 3 through 12th-grade age are invited to participate in the nondenominational program to be held daily from 9:30 a.m. until 11:45 a.m.

Tuition for the two-week session is free, however, offerings for both expenses and a missionary project will be welcomed.

Working with co-directors Mrs. Don Johnson and Mrs. Thomas Williams will be Mmes. Jack Wade, Duane Graham, Leslie Leslie, Don Hamilton, Calvin Garner, Lowel Battcher, Frank Da Silva, James Sanders, Nick Nicholson, Paul Nielson and William Lemos. Also on the staff is Al Oppenheisen.

For registration information you are invited to call Mrs. Jack Wade, 659-3643 or Mrs. Tom Williams, 659-4351.

Mrs. Don Johnson was re-elected president and installed with members of her board at the annual Potluck Spring Salad Luncheon of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild.

Tables in the Fellowship Hall were decorated with floral arrangements by luncheon Chairman Mrs. David Hoisington who also served as installing officer.

Serving with Florence will be Mrs. Loring Warner, vice president; Mrs. Paul Edwards, recording secretary; Mrs. Edward Capen, treasurer; and Esther Trevino, corresponding secretary.

The entertainment during the afternoon was provided by Sterling Mummert, who illustrated his topic, "An Amateur's Approach to Art," with slides taken locally and at Hearst Castle.

Peggy, Kent Heneks welcome newborn

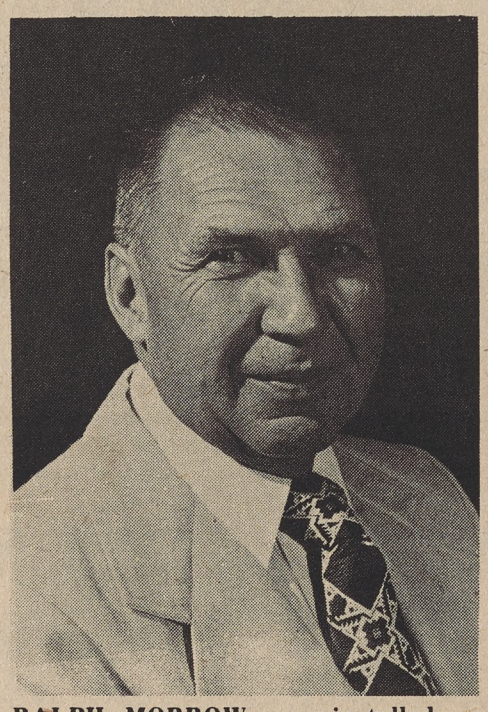

The population of the Rana Creek Ranch increased with the arrival on May 4 of Sadie Jayne Heneks. The baby daughter of Peggy and Kent Heneks weighed six pounds, seven ounces on the Community Hospital scales.

Many lovely gifts awaited the baby's arrival and were presented during a luncheon stork shower held around the pool at the Rana Creek Ranch.

Adding their welcome were Sadie's brother, Mike; paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Heneks of Santa Rosa; maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mills of Long Beach; and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Mades of Los Angeles.

Carmel Valley Lions install new officers

RALPH MORROW was installed as president of the Carmel Valley Lions Club during a gala evening for members and guests at the Buckeye restaurant. He and his wife, Beth, make their home on Merrill Way.

The Carmel Valley Lions Club named Ralph Morrow to head the 1978-79 board of directors. The new board was installed at a dinner party at the Buckeye restaurant last week. Retiring president Frank Catalano and his wife, Phyllis, were cited for their service by master of ceremonies Dick McKenzie.

Other new officers installed were:

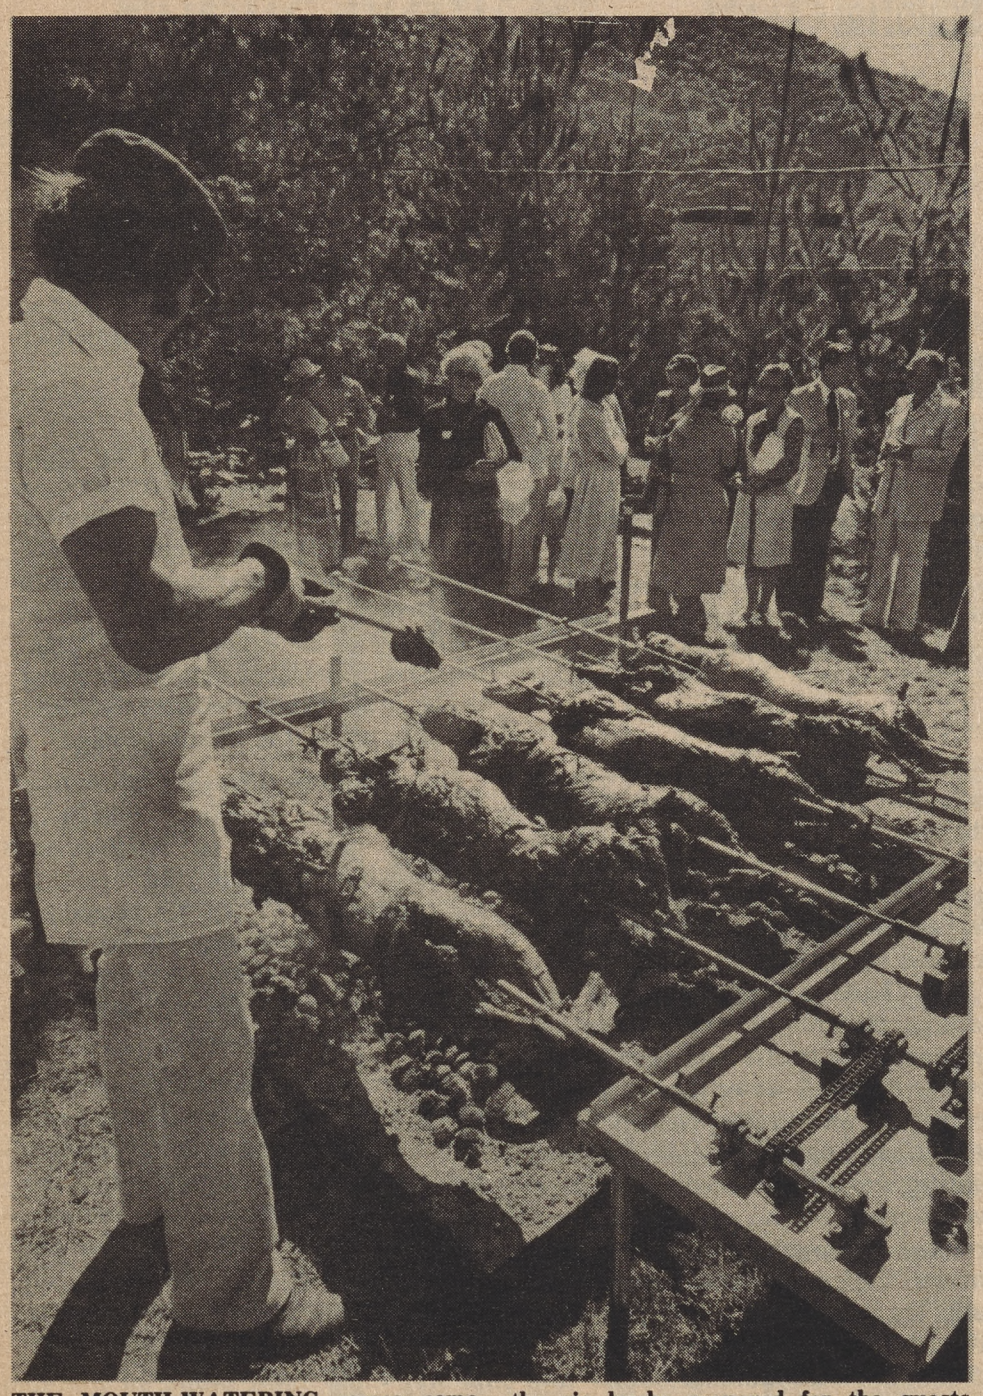

Murray Marshall, first vice president; Richard Reyes, second vice president; Peter Delfino, third vice president; Frank Catalano, secretary; Tony Ricigliano, treasurer; Armondo Soto, tail twister; Bob Heffes, lion tamer; and directors Maury Nessel and Dick McKenzie.

Many out-of-town guests were on hand for the festivities including former Valleyites Tina and Mal Tavares of the Orcutt Lions Club and Elaine and Art Fosso of Thousand Oaks Lions Club. Both Mal and Art have been elected president of their clubs for the coming year.

Other dignitaries included installing officer and past district governor Louis Mammini and his wife, Rose, of the San Martin Lions; cabinet secretary elect Virgil Williams and his wife, Lillian, of the Salinas Host Lions; and Mr. and Mrs. Garry Anloff, Carmel Host Lions.

zoning, but not under the plans?" asked Commissioner Joseph Sullivan.

"Yes," Peters replied. He added that when the Peninsula Area Plan was adopted in 1966, zoning did not have to be brought into compliance with the plan.

If that had been required, he said, "it would be unequivocal that it would be in "O" zoning (open space) now."

DALTON CITED THE extension of development farther up the Valley—the Hacienda Carmel project and two condominium clusters adjacent to the golf course to the west—as evidence that growth in the Valley already is going on apace.

"The question of spreading urban sprawl ignores what is already there," he said.

Dalton objected to deciding the project's fate on the issue of consistency alone, saying the "development cannot fairly be considered unless all the elements in the use permit can be considered."

"If the project came before you with no environmental impact report and you were basing your conclusion on density, that would be different," he said. "In this instance, we have an entire EIR that took up to a year in the process with much public input.

"To make a decision on this issue on the bare statement of Dr. Peters would be inappropriate," Dalton declared.

"Mr. Dalton put it, in essence, because you let us do an EIR, in essence you say it is consistent," Peters responded. "I've been telling developers this is an invalid assumption."

Village condos approved, but number is reduced

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission approved rezoning of a parcel in Carmel Valley Village Wednesday to permit a 22-unit townhouse development at Ford and Carmel Valley Roads.

The commission also accepted the preliminary map for the Village Houses subdivision.

The rezoning is consistent with a 1974 advisory committee report on the Village which recommended the property, now zoned for commercial use, go into multi-family residential to restrict the commercial area of the Village to a central core.

The commission action cut back the proposal by developers Bud Evenson, Bernard Friedman and David Smith from 25 units to 22 units.

Evenson argued before the commission that the density should be kept as high as possible because of the need for expensive off-site improvements of the property. These include drainage lines to correct what he called "problems" getting water off the 4.29-acre site.

Two Village residents questioned the drainage from the parcel in letters to the commission, with John Gardner, who owns the tennis ranch downslope of the property across Carmel Valley Road, saying his land is already inundated by runoff from existing development.

Evenson said the development would "take the pressure off the need for carving up the hillsides" in the Valley. It would provide homesites ranging upward from $80,000 in the Village, within walking distance of shops, the community center and Tularcitos School.

Face $50,000 flood protection bill

Riverbank dwellers given more time

CARMEL RIVER landowners participating in riverbank protection projects valued at $1 million will have a little more time to try and find a way to avoid picking up $50,000 in local costs for the work.

But budget constraints because of Proposition 13 make it likely they will have to foot the bill or drop the projects entirely.

Valley residents Jim Cowley and Bill Brown of the Meadows Road area argued before the county board of supervisors Tuesday that they and other landowners should not have to pay for flood control district administrative costs on 23 improvement projects in the Valley.

Construction funds are coming in the form of a federal grant through the Soil Conservation Service.

They will meet with district engineer Loran Bunte Jr. and come back to the board in the next few weeks for final action on the projects.

County Administrator Richard Andrews said the object of the delay is to work out some way for the district to pick up the costs. "I question if it is even feasible," he said, however.

"Their fiscal picture is weak," he said. "They will have to get by on reduced property tax dollars."

SUPERVISOR SAM FARR of Carmel argued that these administrative costs would normally be picked up by the district. They are only being charged to the landowners now because of the passage of Prop. 13.

Brown was critical of the "lack of communication" from Bunte's office about the charges. He said he almost would rather do the work himself "and make sure it is done properly than let flood control do it."

Cowley said, "I'm not averse to paying for it," but he wants a better explanation of where the money is going.

He also fears other landowners in his project will drop out if they have to pay for work, since at least half of them did not suffer property damage last winter when the Carmel River eroded its banks substantially in several places.

SUPERVISOR DUSAN Petrovic of King City said the county is "under the gun" to make cuts under Prop. 13. He said the charges to the homeowners would be part of the trend in the county toward "fees for service." Farr disagreed, saying everyone in the county pays taxes for flood control already.

"The analogy here is you pay taxes for the sheriff and if you call him he charges you extra," he said.

Supervisor Kenneth Blohm of North County was willing to drop the whole Carmel River project.

"If the people in Carmel don't want to do it, we can skip it," he said.

The supervisors approved the fee charges and work program for the Salinas River. The Carmel River projects will come back for board authorization when final plans and specifications are prepared by the Soil Conservation Service.

No meddlers

Dear Editor:

I resent government people coming on to my property while I am at work. They left a "Legal Notice—Do Not Destroy." I got home Friday night and the California Department of Forestry from Holman Highway, Carmel, had been there.

I guess there was nothing else for them to do but trespass on my roof and over my land. If my roof leaks do I contact them?

They say I need a half-inch mesh over my chimney. I have an approved cover on there now.

They also tell me to "remove flammable vegetation around structures." These government people are probably young and eager and drawing a pretty good salary, but they don't know what we've been through up here. We've been 10 years trying to get anything to grow on that back hill. We have seeded it with oats each fall and spring, trying to hold the land when it rains from coming down on top of us and it is about to drop its first seed on the land, then lay itself down to protect the ground for next winter.

I'll be !/ if I shall remove it.

I am tired of the government coming on to my land and telling me what I have to do. When they pay my house and land insurance and make my house payments, I'll consider it again. There are people in that canyon, as in other areas, who break the laws on purpose and live in peace. Go chase them down. If you need help identifying them, go to the planning department, they'll know.

No wonder people keep vicious dogs. When will they come into my house when I am away and tell me what I have to do in there? There are necessary people being laid off every day and I'm helping to pay the salary of a government person to tell me what to do on my own land? No wonder Proposition 13 passed.

Pro-SPCA

Dear Editor:

Regarding the possible loss for the SPCA services to the county of Monterey, there is no way the county can carry on the minimal service to the people of the county in animal control. The SPCA is doing an excellent job at far less than the county can, which has no facilities and an awful reputation.

Now the facilities are all set up at the SPCA with far less expense to the taxpayer than if a new pound were to be established and with far less satisfaction to people who are bothered by strays and by those who empathize with them, as well as with the animal.

Petty antics

Dear Editor:

One wonders if we elected the right people to the Carmel Sanitary District board? McGinnis, Hurst and Head seem to ignore the interests and wishes of those who elected them.

Also, the impression one receives is that the board is their own private little sandbox in which they can play. McGinnis, particularly, seems to relish his "position" and in being able to show off his petty antics. The high-handed and arrogant manner in which they voted to increase sanitary fees and their own stipends in the face of drastic cutbacks in unnecessary government spending is completely uncalled for.

Further, petty bickering and uncooperative attitudes with other board members is evidence of pettiness and immaturity—certainly a characteristic we are tired of seeing in our erstwhile politicians. Some people simply cannot wear authority no matter how minute that authority might be.

Obviously, this board is not working in our best interests. Perhaps a recall could be considered?

Kill the bill

Dear Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the 558 Big Sur residents who have signed petitions requesting Representative Leon Panetta to withdraw his bill creating a $350,000 federal study of our area. The boards of directors of the four legitimate local organizations also oppose the bill: Big Sur Grange, Chamber of Commerce and both the Big Sur and the Monterey Coast Property Owners' Associations.

It is unacceptable to have the same agency, the Interior Department, which would fund the study to also administer, supervise and make the final recommendations.

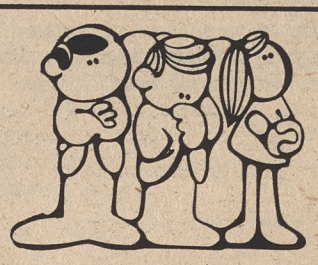

The study is unnecessary because it would duplicate planning work already done or in progress, because our problems are local and are best solved by local means and because Big Sur was "saved" by our 1962 master plan, it became further "protected" by coastal law, and it has been admirably "preserved" by private stewardship—the resident conservators of the land.

We request that Rep. Panetta instruct the Interior Department to withdraw its proposed study to determine the feasibility of a national park designation for Big Sur.

A federal designation of any type would attract a multitude of visitors which would not only disrupt the ecology and damage the environment, it also would destroy the quality of life presently enjoyed by the visitors to and the residents of Big Sur and the Monterey Peninsula.

Big Sur residents and landowners have successfully resisted environmentally detrimental developments from the private, state and federal sectors in the past and we will continue to do so in the future.

Kudos for dedicated panel

By Al Eisner

WHILE RESIDENTS of Carmel Valley and the Carmel area tremble over the possible onslaught of large developments in Carmel Valley that could radically alter the quality of life for the entire area, a dedicated committee has been working hard at trying to devise policies that would allow orderly development.

The Carmel Valley Master Plan Advisory Committee began its work in December 1976. Appointed by Supervisor Sam Farr, the committee is "balanced" . . . that is, there is representation from property owners groups, conservation organizations, real estate interests and development-oriented companies.

They have already pounded out policy statements and detailed documents on traffic and circulation; sewage disposal; water supply; parks, recreation and trails; seismic and geological data; socio-economic considerations; viewshed; and have even worked out an acceptable compromise on something long-sought for Carmel Valley—a slope density formula that regulates building density allowed on hillsides in the Valley.

The final and, perhaps, most important element is a plan for some type of growth management. Agreement among committee members has been reached on the broad approach that would limit the population of the Valley. Refining the various proposals has proven to be a knotty question.

Meeting every Thursday night at Carmel Valley Manor in Carmel Valley, the advisory group is grappling with proposals in three major areas: assignment of development rights, limiting the number of building permits actually issued or placing a limit on the number of lot subdivisions allowed. The latter is described as an attempt to eradicate "parcel pollution."

The committee is expected to complete its studies on the growth management question within the next month. At that time, all of the committee's work will be turned over to an as-yet unnamed consultant who will synthesize the reports and rewrite them in a form that can be submitted to the Monterey County Planning Commission for public hearings. The board of supervisors will eventually adopt or reject the revised plan or an amended version.

THE IMPORTANCE of the committee's work was underscored a couple of weeks ago when Supervisor Michal Moore, voting to delay action on a proposed development at the mouth of Carmel Valley because it was in conflict with the existing master plan, impatiently declared that he was going to vote in accordance with the details of the plan when it is finally adopted.

The committee finds itself divided on a fundamental question: Should a "holding capacity" be worked out which will determine the eventual population of the Valley? Or, should we adopt a plan which might bring us to the brink of pollution, trusting that technological advances will solve the problems when they arise?

The former approach makes sense to a lot of folks here. It states that we will take a cautious approach to development until we're darn certain that the grave environmental considerations can, in fact, be solved. Despite the pollution control devices on automobiles, air pollution continues to get worse in California, because there are many more autos on the roads.

Technically oriented members of the committee, on the other hand, are confident that answers will be found to the problems in time.

If the community adopted that position, wouldn't we be playing a kind of Russian roulette with the environment of a beautiful area? Once we've ruined it, will we ever be able to replace it? Haven't we learned anything from the experiences of cities and counties throughout California that became virtually unfit for human habitation because of reckless growth policies?

CARMEL VALLEY is fortunate because it has an alert, involved citizenry that has proven time and again that it will fight to preserve the fragile beauty of the Valley. We urge you to follow the activities of the committee carefully in the coming weeks and months, and make your voice heard when the crucial votes are taken by the planning commission and the board of supervisors.

Trash drop site okayed

CARMEL VALLEY Disposal Co. won approval Wednesday to build a trash transfer station and recycling center in Carmel Valley Village, the only acceptable site the firm could find after several months of searching.

The Monterey County Planning Commission granted a two-year use permit for the facility on Pilot Road on a 5-1 vote. Commissioner William Peters of Carmel Valley opposed, with commissioners Peter Cailotto, Charlie Williams and Manuel Jimenez absent.

Peters admitted the need for the facility but said it would make little sense for trash trucks to drive up Carmel Valley Road to the Village so their loads could be compacted and then hauled back down the Valley to the Marina dump.

He offered to support the motion if the firm was barred from bringing Mid Valley trash up-Valley, but could get no support for that position.

ARCHITECT SABASTIAN Bordonaro, representing applicant Elio Chiappe, said it would not be economically feasible to bring only Upper Valley trash to the center. Collection trucks will come from as far west as Robinson Canyon Road to the Village site.

There were neighbor objections to the transfer station proposal because of potential noise and vermin problems.

Impact report ordered on scaled-down tract

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has ordered that an environmental impact report be prepared for the proposed Vista Nadura subdivision in Carmel Valley despite a request from Supervisor Sam Farr that cluster development be considered first.

Carl Hooper of Bestor Engineers Inc. mentioned that developer Nader Agha of Pebble Beach withdrew plans for 220 condominium units on the 1,298-acre parcel because of public opposition.

The EIR will be for the proposed 260-lot subdivision. The earlier proposal was for 200 homesites and 220 condominiums. The land is on the north side of Carmel Valley Road, west of the Tierra Grande subdivision.

Farr suggested that it would be a better procedure to look into the option of clustering some housing envisioned in the proposal now, rather than having an EIR prepared for the 260-lot development.

"This is a problem we get into," he said. "As this project goes down the line, there will be tremendous opposition. We would solve a lot of problems by doing it right from the first. Now, each time the proponents get some negative feedback, they will modify their proposal. I think that would be taking the wrong road."

Farr suggested that a specific plan for the property might be best, similar to the one approved for the Carmel Valley Ranch development proposal.

Agha said he has dropped the idea of cluster housing since public opposition surfaced when the proposal was first presented to the planning commission.

"We're just interested in selling lots," he said. "We're not interested in building clusters."

Supervisor Edwin Norris of Salinas said the cluster housing option would be included in the EIR, which must consider alternate uses for the land.

The board voted unanimously to require the EIR.

'Mice and Men' opens

Pine logs will blaze in the great open stone fireplaces on either side of the outdoor stage of the Forest Theater when Of Mice and Men, John Steinbeck's moving story of the friendship between two ne'er do wells, opens the seventh annual summer festival at the outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

Of Mice and Men opens Thursday, June 29, and continues Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings until July 29. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. each evening. The second production of the season, William Shakespeare's Henry IV, Part I, will be staged Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings Aug. 3-Sept. 2.

The 1978 festival is presented by the Forest Theater Guild in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College. The Guild is a nonprofit organization of Monterey Peninsula residents formed to preserve the Forest Theater and present an annual Shakespeare Festival. This year's production of Of Mice and Men marks the first time since the Forest Theater Guild was organized in 1971 that a play not written by Shakespeare has been chosen for the summer production.

Cole Weston, who will direct Of Mice and Men, has directed plays on the Peninsula since 1946, when he joined a group of theater enthusiasts who would occasionally present a play at the Forest Theater. He directed such plays as Winterset, Playboy of the Western World, The Women, Oliver and Pipe Dream at the theater and he designed and supervised the building of the Theater-in-the-Ground under the main Forest Theater stage. He was the first cultural director of the city of Carmel from 1966 to 1969 and from 1970 to 1974 he traveled and filmed in the Caribbean and the South Seas aboard his yacht Scaldis. For the past three years, he has lectured throughout the United States about his photography and that of his late father, Edward Weston.

The story of George and Lennie, two traveling ranch hands, is set in the Salinas Valley during the Depression. George is a fast-talker who has a protective attitude toward his companion Lennie, a mildly retarded man who loves soft things and doesn't realize his own strength. Harold Peiken will play George in the Forest Theater production, and Henry Littlefield is Lennie. Other cast members are Bill Logan as Candy, Harry E. Rogers as the Boss, Adam Lembeck as Curley, Joeen Sheer as Curley's wife, David Saint-Amour as Slim, Jeff Hudelson as Carlson, Gene Tackett as Whit and Brad Vaughn as Crooks.

Tickets for all performances are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for full-time students and enlisted military personnel. Group rates are available for 20 or more upon request. There are no reserved seats in the Forest Theater, but the natural amphitheatre provides a good view of the huge stage from all locations.

Tickets are available at the box office, which opens at 7:30 p.m. on performance evenings; at Bartlett Music, Dolores and Fifth, Carmel; Lily Walker Records and Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and by mail, P.O. Box 1500, Carmel, Calif. 93921.

Theatergoers are reminded to wear warm clothing because evenings in Carmel are frequently chilly. Hot drinks and homemade cakes will be sold by members of the Children's Experimental Theatre during intermission, and many people bring warming libations to the theater with them.

Fireworks restricted

Those who wish to celebrate the Fourth of July with fireworks may do so only in restricted areas on the Monterey Peninsula.

Safe and sane fireworks will be permitted within the city limits of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Seaside and Marina and at the beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue in Carmel. Only nonexplosive fireworks with the State Fire Marshal's seal are legal. Firecrackers and fireworks that shoot into the air are banned throughout the state.

Elsewhere, all fireworks are banned in unincorporated areas of Monterey County, in all national forests and at all state parks and beaches.

No municipal fireworks displays are planned on the Monterey Peninsula on July 4.

Independence Day Parade Sunday

The 30th Annual Seaside Independence Day Parade and Celebration Sunday, July 2, is expected to attract approximately 100 entries, including drum and bugle corps from all over the Bay Area, drill teams, marching bands and floats.

The parade will begin at Broadway and Del Monte at 1 p.m. and proceed east to Fremont, then south on Fremont to Hilby for dispersal.

A barbecue and two hours of free entertainment will follow at the Seaside City Hall, 440 Harcourt Ave. Barbecue tickets are $2.50 for ribs, $2.25 for chicken and 50 cents for hot dogs.

Horse show at fairgrounds

The Morgan horse, the first truly American breed, will be on display at the 19th annual Golden West Regional Championship Morgan Horse Show at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey, Friday-Sunday, June 30-July 2. General admission is $1.

One of the outstanding Morgan horse shows in the country and the largest event in the western United States, the Golden West show is expected to attract more than 200 entries this year.

The Morgan horse traces its origins back to a fabled stallion who was foaled in Massachusetts in 1789. Called "Figure" during his 29-year lifespan, the horse was ultimately named "Justin Morgan" in honor of his owner, who brought him to Vermont as payment for an old debt.

During his lifetime, Figure's fame, stamina, vigor, good disposition and stylish way of moving became legendary. The Morgan's natural gaits are walk, trot and canter and they can be ridden Western or English.

The versatile horse is commonly found today in show rings, on the range, out on the hunt field and on bridle paths over the entire country, in England and Australia.

The three-day show will include morning, afternoon and evening performances at 8 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. each day.

Highlights of the show will include colts and fillies in hand (shown on halter, not ridden), trotting races, pleasure driving, jumping, harness driving, pleasure and roadster classes with light, two-wheeled carts.

A crowd pleaser is the Jack Benny class for which riders must admit to being at least 39 years old. The open roadster class promises excitement as the carts pick up considerable speed as they circle the area.

Saturday morning and afternoon are good times for people interested in breeding Morgan horses to attend.

MORGAN STALLION "Big Ben Top Notch," owned by Mr. and Mrs. Dale Haass of Carmel, is typical of the Morgan horses to appear in the 19th annual Golden West Regional Championship Morgan Horse Show at the Monterey County Fairgrounds Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 30-July 2.

Custom-made boots are an old tradition with horsemen. In America, the best known "name" in custom-made riding boots is Dehner. If you ride English style at all, at some point in your life you simply must have a pair of "Dehners."

When our equestrian tour of the Midwest brought us to Omaha, Nebraska, we simply had to visit the Dehner company. Perhaps seeing the boots made would explain some of the mystique that surrounds Dehner boots.

When Pauline Herman at Farm Center measures your foot to order Dehner boots, she writes exact measurements for both right and left foot and leg on a pink order sheet. Very few people have matching right and left legs—one of the reasons why there is a continuing demand for custom-made boots.

The pink order sheet winds up on a scarred work table in the upper left hand corner of one of the oldest buildings in downtown Omaha. The courtyard out in back used to be a corral for 30 horses. Cowboys came in here at the end of the long cattle drive to wash up and rent a hotel room. The old bricks and narrow wooden staircases have echoed to more than 100 years of boots.

From the information on the pink order sheet is drawn a pair of brown paper patterns to which is paperclipped a work order card that also carries the essential information. Not only size and shape is important . . . materials and style are important, too.

Although Omaha is in the heart of American cattle-raising country, calfskins for the exterior of Dehner boots are imported from France. Young John Ketzler, vice president of the company, explained that Frenchmen have a taste for veal. The French calfskins are from animals about six months old. They also lack the blemishes that would be found on American range-raised steers. The skins are tanned in Italy.

A great pile of soft, supple calfskins was stacked in the middle of the floor for the bootmakers to choose from. Only the best part of each skin is used. Blemished, thickened or unevenly colored pieces are rejected. There are a lot of scraps of calfskin which are wholesaled off to wallet manufacturers.

The lining of the new boots is cut from American cowhide. Each leather piece is marked with the number on the work order. Even with hundreds of pairs of boots in the building, there is no chance that Janet's boots will have John's legs.

The boots are cut one-fourth inch smaller than the measure. This accommodates a natural stretch in leather. One of the final processes in the bootmaking procedure is to wet and shape the legs which stretches some of the quarter-inch back in. The rest is stretched by the owner on his leg during the breaking in process. This is why Dehner boots retain their elegant fit over 20 years of hard wear.

Although leg pieces are cut to a custom-made pattern, the foot part of the boot is built on standard wooden lasts padded with leather to meet the measurements. When necessary, leather bunions are added to the last so that the finished boot fits them, too.

The pieces and parts of the boots are assembled by gluing them together with rubber cement before stitching. The rubber cement between the layers remains as a permanent moisture barrier. This is why boot owners are told to oil their boots inside AND out. Treatments applied to the outside of the boot do not penetrate to the lining.

About three dozen employees who look deceptively unhurried are employed in manufacturing boots. A feeling of friendship and an ever available coffeepot underscores the fact that these skilled craftsmen turn out nothing less than absolute perfection in every pair of boots.

Once in a great while, as in any zero defects program, a mistake will happen. These boots are not mailed out to the customer. They are sold in the front office as "orphans."

Mr. Ketzler indicated a very sharp rotary blade used to trim the excess sole down to size. "One day one of our employees had the hiccups while trimming soles," he smiled. "He hiccupped four times and made four orphans."

After trimming, the soles are bleached white, stained and waxed. When the heels are nailed on, the boot is ready to go downstairs where it is dipped in water and dried overnight on boot trees at a temperature of 110°F. The Dehner Co. has 120 pairs of 14-inch boot trees and almost all are in use all the time. Sometimes owners send in old tired boots to be revived by the water shaping treatment. More commonly, a boot owner puts on weight as he ages and his boots don't so he sends them in to be stretched.

It takes 10 to 12 weeks for a pair of boots to find its way from that upstairs corner down to the shipping department. "However," Mr. Ketzler explained, "if the entire shop were shut down except for one pair of boots, it would still take four to six weeks to make that one pair."

In addition to riding boots, Dehner Boot Co. makes special boots for the Los Angeles Police Dept., the Dallas Police Dept., the Colorado State Patrol and for the space shuttle program.

In riding boots, the most demanding orders usually come from Californians. "Everything new in riding," sighed John Ketzler, "comes from California."

Californians created the demand for Blucher boots, for unlined and boots partially unlined at the point of contact with the horse.

One of the reasons Dehner boots look so elegant is a high rise on the outside of the leg which gives the illusion of greater length. Now, for Californians, that high rise is being moved slightly more frontward so the boot won't bind behind the knee.

Back downstairs in the front office anyone may walk in off the street to inspect the dozen or so pairs of orphan boots offered at bargain prices. Each wears a cheerful tag: Hi! I'm an orphan and I would like someone to take me home. My foot size is ..... (sizes ranged from children to giants) and I cost only ..... (prices ranged from $90 to $150)."What advice do you have for the person going through the agonies of breaking in new boots?" we inquired of Mr. Ketzler. Half the office staff immediately broke in with wide grins. "Just wear them!" called out the woman opening mail. "Wear them a lot!" sang out the typist.

"And wear them and wear them," agreed John Ketzler. "That's what we make them for."

Trustees begin school budget cutbacks positions in the district unless exempted by the board.

Both the Association of Carmel Teachers and the Carmel chapter of the California School Employees Association protested the action strongly.

Bruce Stannard, president of ACT, said he considered the move an unfair labor practice. After the meeting, he said the association might file a complaint on the action unless the trustees open negotiations with the teachers on their contract for the coming year.

THE 13.5 PER CENT cut anticipated by Carmel is below the maximum cut statewide—15 per cent—but above poorer neighboring districts like Pacific Grove, which anticipates a 10 per cent property tax drop, and Monterey Peninsula Unified, where a 9 per cent drop is expected, according to Kevin laGraff, aide to Assemblyman Henry Mello (D-Watsonville).

The $5.8 billion state income and sales tax surplus was used by the legislature to bail out local government through June 1979. Less money is expected from this source next year to offset a projected 60-plus per cent drop in property tax collections.

Meatless cooking to be taught

A five-week course in vegetarian gourmet cooking will be offered through the Carmel Unified School District Adult School program beginning next Thursday.

The class will be taught by Helaine Clark, a vegetarian and natural foods cook for six years.

The class will meet each Thursday for five weeks from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Carmel Middle School.

The fee is $20. Students need only "bring your appetite," according to Miss Clark.

More information about the course is available by phoning 624-1714.

The same class also will be offered on Wednesdays through the Monterey Recreation Department. It will cost $25 and be at the Neighborhood Center, Lighthouse and Dickman Avenues. Information is available by phoning 372-8121.

Flood plain zoning is 3 years off

It will be three to four years before Monterey County has comprehensive floodplain zoning for the Carmel Valley and other flood-prone areas of the county, according to Bob Binder, assistant district engineer of the county flood control district.

In a memo to the board of supervisors Tuesday, Binder said the county has contracted with a private consultant to prepare flood insurance rate maps for the entire county. The rates will be based on a parcel's location in a floodplain and its risk of inundation.

Binder estimated it would take three years to prepare these maps. They will be drawn on the basis of "comprehensive floodplain zoning ordinances," according to his memo.

In the interim, the county will concentrate on limiting development in primary flood channels and require minimum floor elevations for new construction, Binder said.

There is no floodplain zoning in the Carmel Valley now, although the county requires a minimum floor level above the 100-year flood mark.
